Is this the first time you've done laundry in your life?
Patterned lines of meter and rhyme
seek to evoke the nameless sublime,
and close the gaps of what we may know where the mind scarcely dares to go.
Don’t fear the verse that settles in your veins
and opens intellect to strain after strain of knowledge; slake the thirsting of your wit
if you only tune your ear to hear it.
Where the cherry orchards meet the road,
the words to a poem, like seeds, are sewn,
cultivated in the mind and hoed
into fruit red-ripe and full-grown.
And in each verse, between each line bestowed breathes all that we live, all that is known.

A Change in Me

---By Yoko Nakata

Boring, empty, no hope
I met you

“I’m afraid”
“No one’s gonna hurt you”
“I’m scared”
“Everyone has nothing to be scared of”
“I can’t do it”
“Yes, you can. You can do whatever you want if you try”
“I’m so dead”
“No, you’re not. Don’t give up”
“I’m hated by everyone”
“Nobody hates you. Everyone loves you”
“No one understands me”
“I understand you”
“I’m sorry”
“Don’t be sorry. You never did anything to me”

“Crying is useless.
Smiling makes you happy”

“You’re the Best thing that ever happened to me.
Thanks to you, I found the confidence in me.
You’re my best friend!”

- I can’t let go of you-“I’m not gonna waste my tears on you”
- I cried for you because I miss you so badly-
“It was the best summer ever”

“Will we ever see each other again?”
“Yes, we will.
We’ll keep in touch and we’ll see each other”

We said goodbye
Excited, fulfilled, hope
