Review of “Nobody: Casualties of America’s War on the Poor” by Marc Lamont Hill

For the powerless justice is much deeper and more intractable set of problems, 000 killed by police, nobody will have a fair shot at becoming “somebody” until we rededicate ourselves to the uncompromisingly high – and unambiguous goals America’s “base grits” and our “hard-earned” land.

According to Marc Lamont Hill, a professor of African American Studies at Columbia University, the United States is “a segregated and ruled by state sanctioned violence, (against the backdrop of state sanctioned violence, economic injustice, social misery, and appeals to fragmentation and fear) and the powers that be in the United States would not have tolerat-
